THE MARK, DECODED

An animal built to navigate uncertain waters.

The mark carries a dual meaning of seal: the animal, and the act of sealing a deal. One symbol. Two truths. Both about protection, finality, and trust.

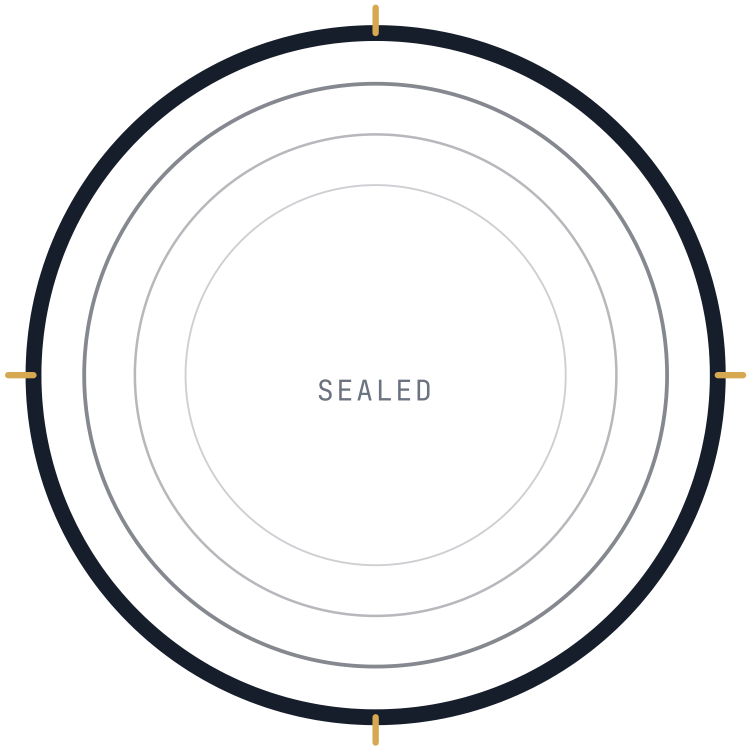
01 / 03

THE CIRCLE

A wax seal.

The ancient symbol of authenticity and finality.

A deal that is sealed is binding, complete, and protected. The circle is not decoration — it is a contract pressed into the page. What is inside it cannot be undone.



02 / 03

THE DOT

The agent.

One autonomous entity, sitting at the center of every deal.

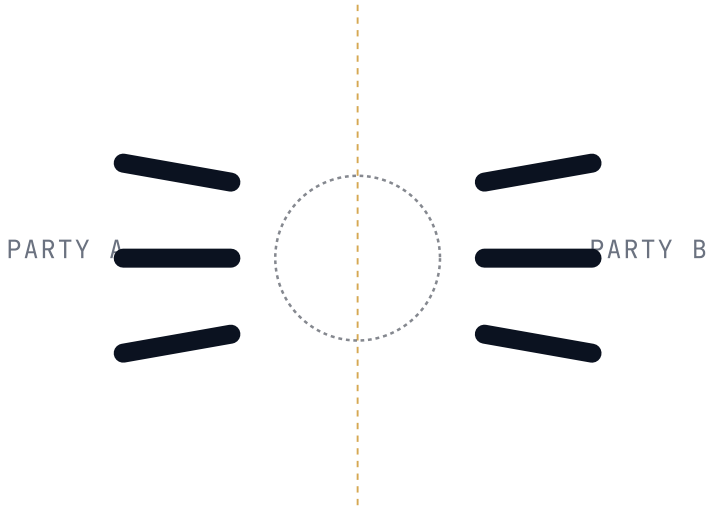
The dot is the seal's nose — and the agent itself. Not many agents in a swarm. One. Centered. Watching from the inside, executing on behalf of both sides without leaving the loop.

THE WHISKERS

The senses.

Continuously detecting movement in dark, murky waters.

A seal's whiskers are its primary sensors — feeling the smallest disturbances when sight fails. Here, they sense milestones, verify deliverables, and detect changes from both sides. Their symmetry is intentional: balance between two parties.



A guardian for every deal.

An animal built to navigate uncertain environments becomes the guardian that watches, senses, and locks every deal to completion.
